
What Ports Are Used By Utorrent UPD

unfortunately, there is no way to change your utorrent listening port. to make matters worse, your router should automatically configure its ports to listen for traffic. the way in which you can tell if your router is listening for connections on your utorrent listening port is to open up your internet explorer. if you are a windows xp user, press the windows key and the r key on your keyboard at the same time. this will open a run box (like the windows start menu). in the run box, type about:internet. this will open the ie homepage. when you type in iexplore into the run box, you should be presented with an internet explorer icon. you can then click on the internet explorer icon to browse to your router on your network. your router's ip address is typically www.192.168.1.1 or http://192. go to ports and click on the port details to open up the settings for your router. if you are on a mac running os x, go to system preferences, click on network and then click on your interface (as shown in the below screen). scroll down until you find your router's ip address and click on it. click on the advanced tab and then click on port forwarding. click on the + button to add a new port. the first field in your port forwarding dialog should be your router's port number on which you wish to forward incoming connections. your port number could be a range of 1-1024. if you leave this field blank, it will forward all incoming connections from your computer or networked device to your router (default port) 3389. if you enter a number greater than 1024, you'll need to open a new port in your router. type in your routers port number in port number and click on forward. click ok to apply the port forward change. click apply to save your settings.
